In the Uk today, teenagers have different hobbies and free time activities. Fewer and fewer teenagers are playing games outside with their friends. 85% prefer playing computer games on their own. In fact playing computer games is one of the most popular activities in Britain. In 2003, British shoppers spent £ 1.152 million on computer games! In general, boys are more interested in computer games than girls.

Teenagers also love watching TV. Watching TV is more popular with boys and girls in the UK than in most other European countries. More than 50% of teenagers have a television in their bedrooms.

Teenagers in the Uk are not getting enough exercise. A lot of local sport centres and new gyms are closed because the majority of girls and boys are keen on sports but they don't practise them. They prefer watching sport on TV to actually playing it. As a result, young people are getting fat, lazy and addicted to computer games.
